US, CUBA TO FLY AGAIN

1 Transportation officials from the United States and Cuba signed an arrangement Tuesday to restore scheduled air service between the two countries, the Department of Transportation said in a statement. The department invited U.S. air carriers to apply for the opportunity to provide scheduled passenger and cargo flights, launching a process to award the new flights, the statement read. REUTERS

LA 'GRIM SLEEPER' TRIAL

2 Opening statements began Tuesday in the trial of a former sanitation worker accused of being the "Grim Sleeper" serial killer, charged with slaying nine women and one girl in a Los Angeles crime spree that spanned more than two decades. Lonnie David Franklin Jr., 63, faces the possibility of the death penalty if convicted. Franklin was indicted on charges of fatally shooting or strangling seven victims between August 1985 and September 1988, and three others between March 2002 and January 2007. REUTERS

LOST MOZART SCORE

3 A long-lost composition by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart and Antonio Salieri was performed for the first time Tuesday after a musicologist discovered the piece in the reserve collection of the Czech national music museum. The piece also appears to show the rivalry between the two was not especially fierce and provides more evidence that Salieri played no role in Mozart's death in 1791 at the age of 35, as the play and Oscar-winning film "Amadeus" suggested. REUTERS

30 STRIKES AGAINST ISIS

5 The U.S. and its allies targeted Islamic State with 30 strikes in Syria and Iraq, the Combined Joint Task Force leading the operations said in a statement. In Iraq, 20 strikes were staged near eight cities, including Al Qaim, where nine strikes hit a logistics facility, two Internet cafés, two headquarters and a media hall used by the Islamic State militant group, the task force said. Ten strikes near four Syrian cities included six that hit an Islamic State weapons cache, headquarters, three weapons storage facilities and a barracks. REUTERS

Pro-pot activists against dispensary

The legal marijuana movement has splintered as a recreational use ballot question vote looms.

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencer.buell@metro.us

Massachusetts' fractured pro-pot movement was on full display yesterday as the state welcomed its sixth medical marijuana dispensary in Lowell.

Across the street from the ribbon-cutting for Patriot Care's new facility in that city were protestors organized by MassCann, a group that cemented its role as the leader of the state's legalization efforts over decades of rallies and advocacy.

MassCann opposes Patriot Care's ties to lobbyist Daniel Delaney, who opposes the current push for recreational legalization via ballot initiative.

Delaney, of Delaney Policy Group, is a registered lobbyist for Patriot Care. He is also running a campaign to oppose a ballot measure that would legalize recreational weed in the state.

"We believe these political goals to be nothing more than an attempt to scuttle the chance to form a tax and regulated market of recreational cannabis in Massachusetts, thus securing the medical monopoly they desire," MassCann's leaders wrote in a statement.

Boston.com first reported on Patriot Care's affiliation with Delaney in January. Delaney has denied that his ties to the dispensary and to anti-legalization are related.

Just a handful of protesters were there for the facility's ceremony Tuesday, but the fact that the opposition took place at all speaks to the splintering of efforts to legalize marijuana in the state — which until recently moved along in steady increments and had mostly been unified.

Voters decriminalized possession of small amounts of the drug in 2008, then legalized it for medical use in 2012. Voters could approve full legalization in November, 2016. Patriot Care also plans to open a dispensary in downtown Boston, as well as one in Greenfield.

Dispensaries run by different companies have so far opened in Salem, Ayer, Brockton, Brookline and Northampton. The first, Alternative Therapies, Inc., in Salem, opened in June of last year. Eleven others have gotten provisional approval from the state to open at dates to be determined.

Activists have criticized the sluggish rollout of dispensaries. The 2012 medical marijuana law allowed as many as 35 facilities to open.

At the end of January, there were nearly 20,000 medical marijuana patients in Massachusetts, and nearly 18,000 ounces of the drug had been sold for medical use in the state, according to the State House News Service.

A group called the Campaign to Regulate Marijuana Like Alcohol is leading the ballot initiative push in the state for full recreational legalization — which, like in Colorado, Oregon, Alaska and Washington state, would allow people to buy and use marijuana without a prescription.

The proposal voters in Massachusetts will likely consider would create new taxes for pot sales, set up strict regulations for dispensaries and limit how much of the plant an individual can grow on their own.

That effort has not been immune to criticism. A rival, more libertarian bid for recreational legalization from a group called Bay State Repeal did not succeed in collecting enough signatures to secure a spot on the November ballot. Its leaders have not joined forces with CRMLA and have continued to oppose it.

Another pot-related battle is currently underway. MassCann's Bill Downing is awaiting a judge's decision on whether he will face distribution charges. Police have alleged he sold marijuana products out of an Allston storefront. He contends he sold oils, creams and cosmetic products derived from hemp, which contained no — or only negligible amounts — of the drug's high-inducing chemical THC.

Family of missing Harvard man asks for public's help

22-year-old Zachary Marr was last seen outside Boston's Bell in Hand Tavern.

MATT LEE
@MetroBOS
mattlee@metro.us

The family of a missing man from Harvard, Massachusetts is asking for the public's help in finding him.

Zachary Marr, 22, was celebrating his birthday in Boston the night he went missing, and security footage shows him leaving Boston's Bell in Hand Tavern around 1:45 a.m. Saturday.

"Friends said he walked out of the bar without a coat on to have a smoke," WHDH reported. "He texted friends that he tried to get back in but he was not allowed because it was closing time. By the time his friends grabbed his coat and went outside, he was gone."

According to Marr's family, the young man was not without his struggles, but he had recently been promoted at work and was in school.

"So many people have been gracious in sharing his story," Jessica Fortier-Gross, a cousin of Marr, told WCVB. "We miss him. We just want him home."

Missing posters hang outside the Bell in Hand in the area where Zach Marr was last seen. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

In Flugtag, which means "flying day" in German, teams in fancy dress attempt to pilot human-powered, homemade flying machines off a platform into water. GETTY IMAGES

Red Bull Flugtag heads to Hub

Red Bull is inviting Boston to take off.

On Aug. 20, Red Bull Flugtag 2016 will be in the city for the first time in its 25-year history, and starting Tuesday applicants can apply for the challenge.

Set along the Esplanade at the DCR Hatch Memorial Shell on the Charles River, Red Bull Flugtag is asking aspiring aviators to put the limits of human flight to the test.

Competitors will build and pilot their own human-powered flying crafts before taking "the plunge" off the 28-foot-high flight deck in front of thousands of roaring fans as they attempt to break the 258-foot distance record," according to Red Bull.

Translated from German as "flying day," Red Bull Flugtag calls for five-member teams of athletes, carpenters, designers, engineers, entertainers and anyone in between to make their dreams of flight a reality.

"The Department of Conservation and Recreation is excited to partner with Red Bull to host their Flugtag event at the historic DCR Hatch Memorial Shell this year," Leo Roy, DCR Commissioner, said. "This one of a kind event will encourage individuals to showcase their creativity in what will be a unique and memorable experience for all who attend. Events such as this expand enjoyment of the Charles River Esplanade to new users."

Red Bull Flugtag encourages creativity on crafts, except copyrighted logos. "The Boston Red Sox, New England Patriots, Celtics, and Bruins are copyrighted logos but Tom Brady, Mark Wahlberg and Matt Damon are not — so game on!" Craft inspiration can be anything from food, sports, pop culture, music, technology or even mythology.

Participants must be 18 or older to apply. Submit flying-machine plans to www.RedBullFlugtag.com by May 13 deadline. Teams will be selected by June 2.

Boston Symphony Orchestra revels in Grammy win

This is the first BSO Grammy win since forming a new recording partnership.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and musical director Andris Nelsons brought home an orchestral performance Grammy on Monday night, their first Grammy win since forming a new recording partnership.

The BSO and Nelsons won the orchestral prize for "Shostakovich Under Stalin's Shadow," ABC reported. The recording is the first that the orchestra has released since entering into a partnership with the Deutsche Grammophon label.

"Firstly I'm very proud of the Boston Symphony Orchestra," Nelsons, who now has his first Grammy with the win, said to the Boston Globe. "All of the wonderful musicians, of course, but also the management team, the board, the supporters and the audience, all the people who are a part of the Boston Symphony family."

The symphony is currently on an undertaking to record a series of Shostakovich symphonies to be released on Deutsche Grammophon, with the next installment due in April, the Globe added.

"I'm thankful to Deutsche Grammophon, our partners — we are going to record the complete Shostakovich symphonies and hopefully some other things as well," Nelsons said to the Globe.

"I'm very proud of the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

Hotel evacuated after pipe burst, flooding electrical room

A pipe burst at a major Boston-area hotel left approximately 250 people evacuated from their rooms as officials worked to repair the building.

Authorities said to WCVB that the busted pipe flooded an electrical room at the Newton Crowne Plaza with four feet of water on Monday, worrying firefighters that the hotel may lose power and leave guests stranded on the upper floors.

"It's like Niagara Falls down there," one worker said to WCVB.

The displaced guests were evacuated to a hotel ballroom, WCVB added, also stating that the pipe burst because of the cold weather.

Fire officials told WHDH that the leak was repaired quickly, but the situation was still dangerous as water was being pumped out, leading authorities to cut power to the building.

During the past weekend, Boston officials told WHDH in a related article that they had received more than 150 pipe-related calls. JASON NUCKOLLS

Hillary Clinton meets with Rev. Al Sharpton in New York City. GETTY IMAGES

Clinton meets with black leaders in NY

Clinton was endorsed by the Congressional Black Caucus political action committee last week.

Hillary Clinton met with black civil-rights leaders in New York City on Tuesday as she seeks to maintain a crucial edge in popularity among black voters over her rival, Sen. Bernie Sanders of Vermont.

"The secretary demonstrated an ease and familiarity with many of the issues we discussed this morning," Marc Morial, president of the National Urban League, said after a two-hour meeting with former Secretary of State Clinton and a half-dozen civil-rights groups at the league's headquarters.

He and other group leaders are due to hold a similar meeting with Sanders in Washington on Thursday.

Clinton's campaign staff has long argued that surging support for Sanders will probably falter as voting for a party nominee moves to more racially diverse states in coming weeks. Clinton's campaign says she has a longer record of working to solve problems that affect black people.

Sanders has said Clinton's polling lead among black voters is partly a result of her being much more famous than he is. He believes many non-white voters will be drawn to his message of fighting economic inequality as they get to know him.

Clinton's status as front-runner to be the Democratic nominee for the presidential election was jolted this month when she beat Sanders by less than one percentage point in Iowa's caucuses, and lost to him by more than 20 points in New Hampshire's primary.

Rev. Al Sharpton also joined the New York meeting, and joked warmly with Clinton in the corridors afterward, suggesting to gathered reporters he had told her who he would endorse.

At a press conference later, Sharpton said Clinton was "candid and open" but also said he had yet to decide whom to support and that no candidate should take the support of black voters for granted. "We are not a monolithic people," he said.

Both Clinton and her husband, former President Bill Clinton, have traditionally had solid support from African-American communities, a key component of the Democratic electorate. Opinion polls show Clinton with a strong lead over Sanders in South Carolina, where blacks are likely to make up more than half of the voters in the state's Democratic primary Feb. 27. REUTERS

Cruz tax plan would slash U.S. revenue, favor wealthy: analysis

A tax plan proposed by Republican presidential candidate Ted Cruz would cut federal revenues by $8.6 trillion over 10 years, adding substantially to the debt, according to an analysis published on Tuesday by a nonpartisan research center.

Cruz's plan, unveiled in November, would create a flat 10 percent individual income tax Center found.

Other changes include repealing the corporate income tax, as well as payroll taxes for Social Security and Medicare, and estate and gift taxes; increasthat with other changes would mainly benefit high-income households, the study by the Washington-based Tax Policy Center found. ing the standard deduction and eliminating most other deductions except for mortgage interest and charity; and adding a broad-based 16 percent value-added consumption tax.

"The plan would cut taxes at most income levels, although the highest-income households would benefit the most and the poor the least," the Tax Policy Center said.

The value-added tax proposed by Cruz, a Senator from Texas who won the Iowa caucuses among Republicans last month, would replace only 70 percent of the costs of the tax cuts, according to the center.

Cruz is a favorite of the conservative Tea Party movement who helped provoke a 16-day government shutdown in September 2013 with his opposition to a spending bill. The goal was to gut the healthcare law known as Obamacare.

Bahrain's public prosecution office said it had ordered the release of the group after interrogating them in the presence of their lawyers.

An American journalist and her camera crew who were arrested in Bahrain and accused of participating in an illegal gathering have left the country after being released on Tuesday, their families said in a statement.

Bahrain had said security forces arrested four U.S. citizens on Sunday while they were "participating with a group of saboteurs who were carrying out riot acts" in the village of Sitra. They were found with cameras and computers.

Demonstrators in Sitra, a Shiite village east of the capital, Manama, have clashed with security forces in recent days as the country marked the fifth anniversary of Arab Spring protests.

The U.S.-allied kingdom, where the U.S. Fifth Fleet is based, put down the 2011 protests by force with help from Gulf Arab states, including Saudi Arabia. But Bahrain continues to see unrest, especially in villages where Shiites are a majority.

Shiites complain of discrimination by the Sunni-dominated government and want more say in the island's politics. Rights groups say the authorities have stepped up a crackdown on dissent and accuse security forces of using torture to extract confessions.

The government denies discrimination and rejects charges of torture. It says it has set up several bodies to monitor compliance with international human rights covenants.

Bahrain did not name the four people detained, but their lawyer and media campaign group Reporters Without Borders identified them as journalist Anna Day and three members of her camera crew, all U.S. citizens.

"We are grateful to the Bahraini authorities for their speedy resolution of the issue and to the U.S. Embassy in Bahrain and State Department officials who worked tirelessly to assist the group."

The families said in a statement

U.S. officials were allowed consular access to the Americans while they were detained, State Department spokesman Mark Toner told reporters.

The families of the journalists said they were thrilled the group had left Bahrain.

Day has reported in the Middle East, North Africa, Asia and Latin America for numerous media outlets, mostly American. According to her LinkedIn page, Day has been a Fulbright Fellow and a United Nations Press Fellow.

Matt Mulberry, a Washington-based journalist who trained with Day at a journalism program in Mexico in 2012, said she knew the region and how to report on popular movements. REUTERS

Group requests special prosecutor in Chicago police shooting

Politicians, pastors and civil rights lawyers petitioned Cook County's chief judge on Tuesday to assign a special prosecutor to the murder trial of a Chicago police officer who fatally shot a black teenager, saying the state's attorney was biased.

Officer Jason Van Dyke, who is white, faces six counts of first-degree murder after shooting 17-year-old Laquan McDonald 16 times in October 2014.

Patrol car dashboard-camera videos of the shooting were released a year later, setting off weeks of protests calling for the resignations of Mayor Rahm Emanuel and of Anita Alvarez, the top prosecutor in Cook County, which includes Chicago.

Alvarez has been criticized for taking more than a year to bring charges in the case, which has become a key issue in her campaign for re-election to a third term next month.

"This is an extraordinary measure that is necessary to restore public confidence," Cook County Commissioner Jesus "Chuy" Garcia said at a news conference on the petition. REUTERS

Key senator undecided on hearing for Obama Supreme Court pick

The Republican head of the Senate panel that weighs Supreme Court nominations said on Tuesday he will wait until President Barack Obama names his pick to fill the vacancy left by Justice Antonin Scalia's death before deciding whether to hold confirmation hearings.

Republicans have threatened not to act on any nominee put forward by the Democratic president for the Supreme Court seat. Obama's nominee could alter the court's balance of power. Before Scalia's death, it had five conservatives and four liberals.

Republicans control the Senate, which the Constitution assigns responsibility for confirming a president's nomination to the court.

Kris Jenner is not pleased with Kanye West

Amid all of cash-strapped Kanye West's ups and downs this week, he's apparently earned himself the ire of his mother-in-law, Kris Jenner. Not a smart move, buddy. At issue is apparently Adidas-loving West's mention during one of his many Twitter rants that sister-in-law Kylie Jenner would not be signing an endorsement deal with Puma. It turns out Jenner was not pleased, not at all. "It really pissed her off," a source tells Radar Online. "Kris was completely livid after he blasted the tweet out saying that Kylie would not take the Puma deal, because Kris worked on that deal. Kanye fails to remember sometimes that Kris is the boss in the family and has a hand in all of her children's endorsements. She told him that she decides which deals her daughters do and not him." I'm guessing this probably isn't the best time for him to ask her for some money?

Adele consoles herself with a burger

So those technical difficulties at the Grammys? Yeah, they were pretty rough. Particularly for Adele, whose performance of "All I Ask" was plagued by sound issues — namely a microphone dropping onto the piano strings and the sound cutting out completely at one point. She looked pretty broken up about it when she got back to her seat, but later in the night the British singer found the perfect remedy for her bad audio blues: "The piano mics fell on to the piano strings, that's what the guitar sound was. It made it sound out of tune. S— happens," she tweeted. "Because of it though ... I'm treating myself to an In n Out. So maybe it was worth it." I mean, probably?

'Walking Dead' fans upset about spoilers that aren't spoilers

Let's talk about spoilers. In this age of streaming, DVRs and delayed viewing, there's plenty of debate about what exactly constitutes one. For instance, when "Star Wars: the Force Awakens" was released, fans begged critics and fellow viewers to take it easy with plot details during the first week of release. But a movie playing in theaters is one thing. A TV show that's already been broadcast? That's another. But not according to some "The Walking Dead" fans, apparently. Sunday night saw the action-packed return of the zombie drama, and on Monday night — during the premiere of "Better Call Saul" — network AMC decided to advertise next week's episode by discussing the crazy stuff that happened the night before. And apparently that was not cool with some fans. "AMC spoiling a one-day-old episode of 'The Walking Dead' during a 'Better Call Saul' break is going to piss a s—load of people off," one fan tweeted. Sure, except that's not really a spoiler anymore, you know? The show aired. Just because you haven't had time to watch it doesn't mean everyone else has to wait quietly until you do.

Stephen Fry quits Twitter

British comedian Stephen Fry can't take the social media heat, so he's getting out of the Twitter kitchen. The sharp-tongued cultural critic raised eyebrows while hosting the BAFTAs in London this weekend when he made a quip about "Mad Max: Fury Road" costume designer Jenny Beavan's ensemble. "Only one of the great cinematic costume designers would come to an awards ceremony dressed as a bag lady," he joked as she left the stage. And viewers at home were not pleased, launching an uproar of responses online. That's apparently where Fry drew the line. "Will all you sanctimonious f—ers f— the f— off? Jenny Beavan is a friend and joshing is legitimate. Christ I want to leave the planet," he tweeted. Well, apparently he settled for leaving Twitter instead of leaving the planet though.

Best Coast's Bethany Cosentino fangirled out when she met Julia Louis-Dreyfus

We would too.

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

Best Coast's Bethany Cosentino calls us from L.A., a week before the band starts their Summer is Forever II Tour with Wavves and Cherry Glazerr. The 29-year-old vocalist/musician is handling all her "responsible adult things" — i.e. going to the doctor, stockpiling travel swag from Target — before she hits the road. She chats "Seinfeld," thrift-ing and the unfortunate hashtag coincidence of #BestCoast.

What things do you like to bring on tour with you?

I always try to take a good collection of DVDs. I think touring is difficult because you just had that one outlet you can turn to to remind you of being at home and you can tune out what you're doing day-to-day for your job. I'll bring a million "Seinfeld" DVDs, even though I've already seen them a million times.

Bethany Cosentino has a hashtag dilemma. JAMIE SHIRLEY

Which character do you relate to the most?

Elaine! She's probably my favorite fictional character of all time, though I don't see her as being fictional because she seems really real to me. I met Julia Louis-Dreyfus once and I totally fangirled on her. I talked about all these Elaine-specific things and she was like, "You know I'm on other shows, right?"

Do you watch "Veep"?

I have yet to watch all of "Veep," but I've been catching it on airplanes because it's always on the [in-flight] TV programming there. I just came back from Ghana and I was flying home across New York, then New York to L.A., and I wanted to stay up so I could go to bed without jet lag. I ended up watching eight or nine episodes in a day. It's really smart and funny.

What are you listening to lately?

Honestly, I feel like for the most part I'm always listening to the same stuff. It's like, Fleetwood Mac or Drake — opposite ends of the spectrum.

But those two flow pretty nicely into each other.

Yeah, they're both pretty mellow, emotional stuff. And when I'm in my car, I'm into this record by Widowspeak called "All Yours." Then also Beach House's "Thank Your Lucky Stars."

I've been thinking a lot about band names that are difficult to Google. Do you run into that problem with Best Coast?

I try not to [Google], to be honest. I try to stay away from Googling myself or reading interviews after they happen. But my parents are very into Googling "Best Coast." I wouldn't be surprised if they have a Google alert set up.

I know on Instagram though, you'll be searching for our tag when I'll try to find a fan photo from one of our shows to put up and that's really difficult because you just pick up people in California at the beach and a lot of weed photos and medicinal marijuana.

If you go:

Oh that's weird but I guess it makes sense.

Yeah, Best Coast is very California-centric lingo. For me, it's a 2Pac lyric, like "West coast is the best coast," but I forget it's a thing. So West Coast rappers or weed stuff comes up when you search for us.

You've done fashion collabs in the past. Do you think you'd do it again?

I would definitely do a collaboration again if the right person or a line I really respected approached me. I love clothes and style, and my mom is a designer. For her, it was a labor of love, but now it's something she focuses on 100 percent. My parents were always supportive of us having our own style and we'd go to thrift stores together.

What city has the best thrifting?

My mom lives in Omaha and whenever I go to Nebraska, I shop because they have great stores. You find stuff and it's like, "You'd never find this in L.A.," and if you did, it'd be $115 in a thrift store.

Rag & Bone create the perfect parka

Life's too short to look like you're walking around in a sleeping bag. So how do you stay warm — and more important, look cool — in the kind of blustery, unpredictable weather we've been experiencing? Designers David Neville and Marcus Wainwright's solution to this city girl conundrum: "Coat and boots!"

To live percussion courtesy of Atoms for Peace, the duo sent out winter essentials that exude attitude and grace: tough quilted bombers with shearling, vintage relaxed jeans, elevated varsity jackets in camo jacquard. But the heart-stopper: a billowy parka with shearling trim and some high-fashion corset detailing on the side. Black patent leather boots with a sturdy platform heel completed the show's grit-meets-polished feel. They seemed comfortable enough to rush through city streets when Uber surcharges strike, and sleek enough to fit right into cocktail hour. Bring it, polar vortex.

Digital platform Havenly makes professional services affordable.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
letters@metro.us

Hiring an interior designer is one of the best things you can do for your home. A fool-proof way to triumph over oddly shaped living rooms, stubborn kitchens and your own questionable taste, it's a next-level commitment that announces loudly and clearly to the world, "Why hello, I am an adult — or at the very least, I appear to live like one."

So why haven't you signed that contract yet? The same reason you haven't done a lot of things: Interior designers are expensive.

Until now, that is. Founded in 2014 by sisters Emily Motayed and Lee Mayer, Havenly is an entirely digital platform that connects clients and interior designers for online consultations. Although the service is not the first of its kind, the price certainly is: For a flat fee of $199, a professional designer will create two custom concept boards for your room and provide product and placement recommendations; for smaller projects, a $79 option offers a mini refresh.

"We see a variety of clients looking for expert help in designing their homes," says Motayed. "They may not have had the resources or ability to hire a traditional interior designer, because in-person designers tend to be cost prohibitive."

Thinking it's time for a little upgrade? Here are some of Havenly's most-requested trends to get you inspired.

Wallpaper

It's true — your grandmother was on to something. "Wallpaper is making a comeback," says Motayed. "An easy way to try it out without being overwhelmed is utilizing an accent wall. We're seeing a lot of gold and metallic wallpapers, but also bold, bright colors on the walls. It's such an easy and fun way to update a room."

Upholstery

Don't have the funds for that new statement couch? Consider reupholstering. "Not only are folks refinishing pieces that they own or were passed down to them, but an easy way to save money is to purchase an item from Ikea or a discount retailer and update it with more luxurious fabrics," says Motayed. "Preppy patterns are having a renaissance — stripes and polka dots and even updated paisley."

Color

Although Pantone forecasted pastels for 2016, Havenly clients are still requesting bold colors. "We're definitely still seeing accent walls of bold blues, pinks and greens — a lot of color-blocking in draperies and carpets, as well," says Motayed. "Lighter colors are being incorporated into the softer accents — blankets and in artwork—that are tying the room together."

Cancer and Alcohol: What Dana-Farber Wants You to Know

Questions often arise about the relationship between alcohol and cancer: Does it increase cancer risk? Is it safe to drink while in treatment? What about after treatment?

Several studies have linked alcohol consumption to a higher risk of many cancers, including breast, mouth, throat, larynx, esophagus, liver, and colon and rectum. The risk rises with the amount of alcohol consumed.

Worldwide, 3.6 percent of all cancer cases and 3.5 percent of cancer deaths are caused by alcohol consumption, according to a 2006 study. The type of beverage doesn't matter – the culprit is the alcohol itself.

Many studies have specifically linked alcohol consumption to increased breast cancer risk. An analysis of data from 53 studies concluded that as the average number of alcoholic drinks consumed each day rose, so did the breast cancer risk. Women who had two to three drinks a day had a 20 percent higher risk of breast cancer compared to women who didn't drink at all.

The American Cancer Society recommends no more than two drinks a day for men and one drink a day for women. The guideline is lower for women because of their smaller body size and because they metabolize alcohol more slowly than men.

Whether it's safe to drink alcoholic beverages during treatment with chemotherapy depends on a number of factors, including which drugs the patient is receiving. Alcohol can interfere with the way some chemotherapy drugs work, so patients should speak with their doctors about any potential side effects of drinking during treatment.

Kimmie Ng, MD, MPH, a medical oncologist in Dana-Farber's Gastrointestinal Cancer Treatment Center, says she is often asked about drinking during treatment. Her recommendation is that an occasional drink is OK, but not more than one drink "on an occasional basis – not daily." Ng says she is conservative because many of her patients have metastases in their liver and are being treated with chemotherapy agents that may affect the liver. She notes that individual physicians may differ in their guidelines.

As for drinking after treatment, there isn't much known about whether the odds of a cancer recurrence are affected by alcohol use after treatment has ended. This is a topic best discussed between patient and physician.

LASIK & Beyond

Taking Human Sight To The Next Level

At New England Eye Center, we truly are taking sight to the next level. Thanks to recent advances in laser and lens implant technology, our highly-trained specialists are helping patients of all ages enjoy the type of clearer, more natural vision they desire. Vision for the way we live here in New England!

From our all-laser, bladeless LASIK procedure – to exciting developments like our Visian Implantable lens - our commitment to leading edge technology is surpassed only by our dedication to personalized patient care. Patients of New England Eye Center find confidence in knowing we offer experience you can trust and technology you can rely on.

NASA-Approved LASIK - Our all-laser, bladeless LASIK at New England Eye Center has greatly improved results and helped take the fear out of having LASIK. The vast majority of our LASIK and PRK patients now achieve 20/20 vision at distance without glasses or contact lenses. Our method of LASIK is the same type approved for NASA astronauts and military pilots.

Implantable Contact Lens - New England Eye Center is among a select group of practices in the country offering patients the benefits of the Visian Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL). Unlike LASIK, the Visian corrects vision by inserting a delicate intraocular lens-like device atop the eye's natural lens, which is why the Visian is also referred to as the 'Implantable Contact Lens.' All of the refractive surgeons at New England Eye Center are qualified and experienced in performing this brief outpatient procedure to insert the Visian ICL. Because no corneal or other tissue is removed in the Visian ICL procedure, visual recovery is extremely rapid and the ICL can potentially be replaced if the eye's focus changes over time.

Refractive Lens Exchange - If you're frustrated with reading glasses and bifocals, our refractive specialists perform a procedure known as Refractive Lens Exchange. By replacing your eye's aging natural lens with a Intraocular Lens Implant customized specifically for your visual needs - and your lifestyle - allowing you to see better, look younger and never have to worry about developing cataracts!

Laser Cataract Surgery - For seniors experiencing changes in their vision – or who have been diagnosed with a cataract – New England Eye Center is turning the dream of Laser Cataract Surgery into reality. We are currently among only the top 3% of practices in the country to offer patients the added precision and accuracy of Laser Cataract Surgery using OptiMedica® Catalys™ Precision Laser System.

This year, take your vision to the NEXT LEVEL by giving yourself or a loved one the Gift of Sight. Now that's a Gift that keeps on Giving. A blessed New Year from the surgeons and staff of New England Eye Center.

New YEAR, New VISION, New YOU!

Still looking at life through rose-colored glasses or contact lenses? Make 2016 the year you resolve to join the millions of men and women enjoying NEW VISION thanks to advancements in eye care from LASIK laser vision correction, to Visian ICL™ (Implantable Collamer Lens) and Laser Cataract Surgery.

Take advantage of our LASIK & Beyond New Year's Resolution Celebration now underway at New England Eye Center. Make 2016 the year you resolve to join the millions of men and women enjoying NEW VISION. From providing routine general eye care, to the latest breakthroughs in LASIK laser vision correction - or the recent advancements in ICL technology and Laser Cataract Surgery - our surgeons and staff are committed to making this new year the best of all.

COUSINS, HARDEN THE ONLY GUYS WHO ARE '2016 NETS PICK WORTHY'

Follow him on Twitter @burke_metro

There is nothing in sports like watching a no-doubt Hall of Fame pro basketball player play for your team from beginning to end. Lakers fans got 20 years out of Kobe Bryant and knew at the start of most every season that they were going to be good ... or at least highly entertaining. Spurs fans have it with Tim Duncan. Bulls fans had it with Michael Jordan. Celtics fans had it with Larry Bird.

All of those guys were drafted by their teams,

James Harden is an MVP-caliber player and the Celtics would have to give up their 2016 Nets pick to nab him. GETTY IMAGES matured with their teams and eventually won multiple championships with those teams.

But it is just so damn hard in the NBA to land one of these players, and you have to be luckier than Conor McGregor on St. Patrick's Day to draft one of these players.

The Celtics took a small bit of criticism in 2007-08 for more or less "buying" a championship. Kevin Garnett and Ray Allen were not homegrown talents and the process did not feel as organic as when the city grew with Bird.

So, as we prepare to enter another phase of Celtics title contention in the next few years (Danny Ainge would have to be Pitino-dumb to screw this thing up right now), which way do fans want this thing to go?

The organic, homegrown route would obviously be preferred. It'd be great to watch Ben Simmons come into his own in a green uniform and for Marcus Smart to be Simmons' sidekick the next time the C's hoist a Larry O'Brien Trophy.

But, as strange as it is to write — the homegrown route is actually much more of a risk than the blockbuster trade road.

Simmons is the flavor of the winter, for sure. But every single year we see college and high school kids endlessly hyped as the "next"

LeBron or "next" Kobe. It rarely, rarely pans out.

Here are the last 10 No. 1 overall picks: Karl-Anthony Towns, Andrew Wiggins, Anthony Bennett, Anthony Davis, Kyrie Irving, John Wall, Blake Griffin, Derrick Rose, Greg Oden, Andrea Bargnani.

There are some really good players in there, for sure. But none have won championships yet.

Excluding the Celtics' horrid lottery luck, let's assume they'll get a top three pick with the Nets pick this summer (the C's currently have the third best odds at nabbing No. 1). The top overall pick does not guarantee you get a franchise-altering player. Nor does a pick at the No. 2 or No. 3 spot. For every Kevin Durant (picked No. 2 overall in 2007), there are three or four Hasheem Thabeets, Derrick Williams' and Otto Porters in the mix. Odds are you'll wind up with a so-so player or even a dud in the top three.

That said, the Celtics'

2016 Nets pick is insanely valuable right now.

General managers across the league are simply salivating over it. It is being treated as though it's a golden ticket to a great future, but there is no guarantee of that.

So, the Celtics should only make a move with the 2016 Nets pick if the odds are in their favor.

Is getting Al Horford and then hoping you can obtain a B+ player later worth it? The odds say no. But is relinquishing the pick for an under-30 superstar with top five potential worth it? Absolutely.

Sacramento's DeMarcus Cousins and Houston's James Harden are the only two players that have popped up in recent trade scenarios that would be worth giving up the Nets pick.

Both of these players are not yet considered "winners" in the league. But both would be MVP candidates in the right situation and both would be worth "buying" in order to make a run a title.

Aries Check out which of your many options has the most depth and longevity. Whether dealing with a personal, financial or professional matter, you have to be realistic.

Taurus Listen to what's being said or offered to you. You may give or get the wrong impression. Ask questions and be as precise as possible. Ridicule and criticism will lead to setbacks.

Gemini Employ your intellect and persuasive ways to get what you want. Choose to use your creative imagination. If you express your thoughts, the response will be educational.

Cancer Follow your gut and act swiftly to avoid interference. Don't worry about what others do. As long as you set your goals, success will be yours.

Leo Don't limit what you can do. Explore the possibilities and stay on course until you are satisfied that you have exhausted every option. A chance to come into some money is apparent.

Virgo Practical applications will bring substantial results. Don't hesitate to use all your resources to reach your goal. Bypass anyone trying to disrupt your plans. Trust in your abilities.
